Controversial comedy debuts

By John Crook

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

One of the most buzzed-about (and possibly misunderstood) shows of the season hits the air this week with the Wednesday, April 4, premiere of "That's My Bush!" on Comedy Central.

Timed to kick off the cable channel's 10th anniversary, the new sitcom from the creators of the rude "South Park" had Washington in a lather weeks before the first script had been written.

Given the merciless skewering George W. Bush has received on "Saturday Night Live," not to mention Comedy Central's own "The Daily Show With Jon Stewart," it's not surprising that early speculation pegged the show as a hatchet job on the new president.

Not so, say Trey Parker and Matt Stone, the show's creators. What most people didn't realize, Stone adds, is that he and Parker had decided to do a White House sitcom a year before the outcome of the 2000 election was even known.

"The idea was never to do a straight political satire. For one thing, nobody wants to watch something with a massive agenda, nor was it our attention to slam anybody, really. We wanted to make the leading character a really great guy you could identify with, like Ray Romano in 'Everybody Loves Raymond.' We thought that was much more subversive somehow."

The target that Stone and Parker had in their satiric sights was tired situation comedy conventions: overenthusiastic laugh tracks, catch phrases and pat, touchy-feely endings where everyone learns a valuable lesson.

Special effects go big

By Candace Havens

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

During summer 2000, moviegoers watched as gigantic waves crushed a fishing boat in "The Perfect Storm" and Tom Cruise dangled from a cliff in "MI-2." A ghostly apparition chased Michelle Pfeiffer and Harrison Ford in "What Lies Beneath," and the stars of "X-Men" fought battles with supernatural strength as they flew through the air.

All these films and most major releases in Hollywood these days use special-effects makeup and computer-generated images to make stories more exciting. And as these effects become more refined and easier to duplicate, the same technology is being used more than ever on prime-time and daytime TV.

In "Allosaurus: A Walking With Dinosaurs Special," airing Sunday, April 8, on Discovery Channel, the producers use CGI to depict aspects of the dinosaurus's life and create images of what scientists think it looked like. The animated sequences show viewers what the world looked like millions of years ago.

"CGI allows Discovery Channel to offer viewers a realistic 'you are there' vision of certain events or periods in Earth's history — like the life and death of a dinosaur 145 million years ago," says "Allosaurus" executive producer Mick Kaczorowski. "That would be impossible to create without this kind of technology."

Fox's "The X-Files" and The WB Network's "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" use special effects on a weekly basis. HBO's crime-drama "The Sopranos," which created a talking fish last season, digitally put the head of deceased cast member Nancy Marchand on the body of another actress in the season opener.

Three hours to 'Jesus'

By Jacqueline Cutler
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

As Christians celebrate Easter today, it's only fitting that the Discovery Channel dedicates its entire prime-time schedule to the three-part documentary "Jesus: The Complete Story."

Full of archaeologists, religious scholars and other experts, the program provocatively yet respectfully contradicts many long-accepted facts of Jesus' life.

Among the revelations:

■ Jesus probably was born in his family's Bethlehem home. During his time, families lived in buildings with livestock on the ground floor. The word for inn in Greek also means upper room, so some scholars say it's quite possible that Jesus was placed in the manger because there was "no room at the inn."

■ A miscalculation in the modern calendar might have misled historians about when Jesus was born.

■ The Dead Sea Scrolls indicate ancient Jews understood astrology and that the Star of Bethlehem was actually an unusual alignment of planets.

■ Severe prohibitions against out-of-wedlock births could have resulted in the virgin-birth scenario as an explanation for Mary's pregnancy.

■ The Last Supper looked nothing like da Vinci's famed painting. Rather, it was a Passover meal during which the participants would have been reclining and Jesus would have been on the table's left side, in the place of honor.

Tribute honors Maris, Mantle

By Jacqueline Cutler
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

During the summer of 1961, the windows were open in the tenements around Yankee Stadium, and the roar from the crowd cheering Mickey Mantle and booing Roger Maris was enough to terrify toddlers. "Those aren't monsters," a father said, trying to calm down one girl. "That's history."

And history was made that summer when Roger Maris broke Babe Ruth's home run record. He hit the 61st homer in the 162nd game. The season, however, was eight games longer than when Ruth played, so Maris went down in sports history with an asterisk next to his name. That asterisk has since been removed.

It was a magical time for baseball, particularly in the house that Ruth built, as teammates and roommates Mantle and Maris battled to break Ruth's 1927 record of 60 homers. An entire nation tuned in to watch the sluggers' bats slam the ball with a satisfying thwack. That level of excitement wouldn't be matched until 1998 when Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa fought to best Maris' record. Until now, that magic had not been captured in a movie.

Credit Yankees fan extraordinaire Billy Crystal ("Analyze This") for the brilliant directing of "61*," premiering Saturday, April 28, on HBO. The McGwire-Sosa slugfest frames the movie, giving it relevance today. Crystal's captures the exact look, mood and detail of the Bronx of 1961.

'Sound of Music' actors star in 'Pond'

By John Crook
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

One of the most beloved screen couples in movie history reteams for the first time in 35 years as Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer ("The Sound of Music") star in a new CBS presentation of "On Golden Pond," airing live Sunday.

Glenn Headly also stars in the production, which is directed by Ernest Thompson. Thompson won an Oscar and Golden Globe Award for adapting his own play for the 1981 feature film, about a tense summer reunion between a senior couple and their divorced 42-year-old daughter.

That feature film, which snared Academy Awards for both Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn, was a major reason why Andrews says she and Plummer initially turned down the project more than once.

"(CBS President) Les Moonves asked me if I would be interested, and at first I wasn't at all sure," she admits. "I was very intimidated by the movie and the fact that it had been done so beautifully and definitively. But (Moonves) wouldn't give up, and everyone kept saying, 'You know, you really should.'"

This new "Pond" certainly promises to be different in a couple of key respects, Thompson says. For one thing, the screen chemistry of the still vital Andrews and Plummer is strikingly different from that of the older Fonda and Hepburn.

The new CBS version also restores the shifting dynamics in the play's triangle of Norman, Ethel and Chelsea, their daughter.
